

Their kids love Spanish, and Krisse Kelly and Julie Campbell are counting on your kids loving to learn the language, too. The sisters officially release their language-instruction DVDs with a party Saturday, fittingly, Cinco de Mayo. But don't be intimidated if your mastery of the language is limited to counting and card games. Kelly, left, and Campbell experienced the benefits of bilingualism at a young age, and sharing those with their children, who appear in the videos. Their bilingual training served the former Brock sisters well - Kelly as an instructor and assistant principal in southern California, and Campbell as a TV news producer and saleswoman - and they've rolled all that into this seven-set DVD series. "We really started our kids out early. Even though they might not be regurgitating it at 1 or 2 years old, they are absorbing it," said Kelly. "As a parent, it definitely reinforces and encourages them." The videos work for grown-ups, too. Kelly and Campbell said they recently had an order from an adult who wanted to start mastering Spanish from an elementary level. For more information, visit www.kidslivespanish.com.

JJ Hensley

Email this slideshow

Send to (email address):

Your email address:

Short message: